

Researching Family in the British Isles

HSP presents an in-depth, 4-day class series on researching family in the British Isles. Through these expert-taught classes, you'll learn how to conduct genealogical research in Scotland, Ireland and England. Classes in using DNA to conduct research are also a part of the curriculum.

Learn how and where research on British family can be conducted, and what information can be discovered!

(Planning to attend the British Institute at the LDS Family History Library? Researching Family in the British Isles can give you a solid grounding, and help you get the most out of your research! More information is available on the British Institute at www.isbgfh.org [1].)

Special consultations will be available during the course to help you with your research of a specific topic or family related to the British Isles of Ireland and Scotland, or DNA and in using resources appropriate to those countries. During the sixty minute consultation, you and the genealogist will:

- Review the records and sources already explored to determine where to look next
- Develop a research plan
- Get advice on "breaking through" a brick wall research problem

Space is extremely limited. Consultations are $125/session, and can be purchased during checkout.

Instructors:

- Dr. Maurice Gleeson, MB, London based genetic genealogist [3]
 - Christine Woodcock, Genealogy Tours of Scotland [4]
 - Frank Southcott, President, International Society for British Genealogy and Family History [5]
