How Mother, Daughter Live on $38 Relief a Week: Welfare Rights Leader Hopes Poverty Won't Destroy Child

By LAWRENCE M. GELLER

Let's think about how to live when you have no income, no savings, no job, no place to go, nothing to eat. How do you manage to get by? What do you do when you're hungry and there's no money? How do you cope when you have to make ends meet while trying to raise a child? These are questions faced by many families in the United States, particularly those living in poverty.

The article describes the experiences of a mother and her daughter, who live on $38 a week from welfare. The mother, a welfare rights leader, is trying to raise her daughter despite the challenges of poverty.

The daughter, who is in school, faces the hardship of not being able to afford proper clothing or school supplies. The mother, who is also a student, struggles to balance her studies and her responsibilities.

Despite the challenges, the mother remains determined to provide a better life for her daughter. She believes that education is the key to breaking the cycle of poverty.

DEDICATED is achieving a decent standard of living for persons on welfare. Mrs. Hazel Leedle points to the need of the Pennsylvania Welfare Rights Movement calling for contributions. She is chairwoman of the Philadelphia Welfare Rights Organization, 1520 Green St., which holds the famous "Blood Donation" two months ago.

The article is a heartwarming story of resilience and hope in the face of adversity. It highlights the importance of education and the need for support for those struggling to make ends meet.

Reproduced with permission of the copyright owner. Further reproduction prohibited without permission.