Collection 3125

Abstract

This collection contains an assortment of miscellaneous materials predominantly relating to the Fisher family of Philadelphia and several related local families, including the Willings, Francises, Drinkers, and Whartons. To a lesser extent, the Middleton, Logan, and Harrison families are also represented. The families documented in this collection are some of the oldest and most prominent families in the Delaware Valley.

Items in the collection date from 1682 to 1971 with the majority of the materials dating from the period 1750 to 1956. The bulk of the collection consists of family correspondence; also included are genealogical papers, estate and business records, as well as family photographs.

Background note

The first Fisher family member to settle in the Philadelphia region was John Fisher, who, by 1681, was included among the city's earliest property owners. John's grandson Joshua Fisher (1707-1783), merchant and founder of Joshua Fisher and Sons, and son of Thomas Fisher and Margery Maud, married Sarah Rowland (1716-1772). Joshua and Sarah's son Thomas Fisher (1741-1810) founded the Westtown School located in West Chester, Pennsylvania, managed Pennsylvania Hospital, and was an original member of the American Philosophical Society. Thomas married Sarah Logan, and they had seven children: Sarah (b. 1774), Joshua (1775-1806), Hannah Logan (1777-1846), William Logan (1779-1780), William Logan (1781-1862), James Logan (1783-1814) and Esther (1788-1849).

Joshua Francis Fisher (1807-1873), son of Joshua Fisher (1775-1806) and Elizabeth Powel Francis (b. 1777), was a prominent nineteenth-century Philadelphian. A lawyer and philanthropist, Joshua Francis Fisher was an active member of both the Historical Society of Pennsylvania and the Pennsylvania Institution for the Instruction of the Blind, later becoming vice president of the former. Joshua was also a noted lecturer and essayist on topics relating to political figures and the electoral processes.

Joshua Francis Fisher married Elizabeth Iazard Middleton (1815-1890), daughter of Henry Middleton, South Carolina congressman and governor and United States minister to Russia, in 1839. They had seven children: Elizabeth Francis (1840-1919), Sophia Georgiana (1841-1926), Mary Helen (1844-1937), George Harrison (1846-1847), Maria Middleton (1847-1933), George Harrison (1849-1925), and Henry Middleton (1851-1939).

The Willing and Francis families were significantly involved in Philadelphia's mercantile affairs; together, in the eighteenth century, they established the merchant firm Willings and Francis. Anne Willing (1733-1812), was the daughter of Charles Willing (1710-1754) and Anne Shippen (1712-1790). Anne Willing married Tench Francis Jr. (1730-1800), who served as the Penn family's land agent until the Revolutionary War, when he became principal of the First Bank of North America. Their children included Thomas Willing, Sophia Francis (d. 1851), and Elizabeth Powel Francis (b. 1777).

The Drinker and Wharton families relate to the Fishers through the marriage of Henry Middleton Fisher (1851-1939) to Mary Elwyn Wharton (1864-1941) in 1894 and the marriage of their daughter, Mary Frances Fisher (1896-1974), to James Blathwaite Drinker (1882-1971). James Blathwaite Drinker was the son of Henry Sturgis Drinker (1850-1937) and Aimee Ernesta Beaux (b. 1852), the sister of renowned American society portraitist, Cecilia Beaux (1855-1942). James and Mary Frances Drinker's children included Henry M. (b. 1920), Sandwith (1922-1945), James (b. circa 1927), and Polly (1928-2008).

Frances Brinley Wharton (1861-1959), daughter of Henry Wharton (1827-1880) and Katherine Johnstone Brinley (1837-1925), and sister of Mary Elwyn Wharton, was possibly the author who wrote under the pseudonym "Phoebe Lyde." Ms. Lyde had numerous short stories and poems published during the early years of the 20th century in Lippincott's Magazine.

Scope & content

The miscellaneous materials in the Dr. and Mrs. Henry Drinker Collection, dating from the late seventeenth century to the mid twentieth century, document the personal as well as some financial affairs of several prominent Philadelphia families, most notably the Fisher family. Genealogical reports containing several family members highlighted in this collection are available in Appendix 1 starting on page 14.

The collection includes mostly correspondence alongside photographs and items that provide genealogical, estate, and business information. While some letters discuss public affairs explicitly, many family letters also indirectly reflect of the political, economic, and social events of the time while providing insight into family structure, religious beliefs, and eighteenth- through twentieth-century Philadelphia culture. Letters provide commentary and first-hand accounts relating to major events in U.S. history, including the French and Indian War, the American Revolution, the Civil War, World War II, and the Korean War.

The papers in this collection were originally arranged—for the most part—according to family surname Fisher, Francis, Willing, Drinker, and Wharton. This arrangement has been maintained.

The following are brief box-level descriptions of some of the materials in the collection. Further folder-level descriptions are available in Appendix 2 starting on page 16.

Boxes 1 to 3 contain papers from the Fisher family that date from the late seventeenth to the late nineteenth century. These are predominantly correspondence; other materials include family estate, business, and financial papers as well as items that provide information on Fisher family genealogy.

Joshua Francis Fisher is primarily represented in the materials, which include correspondence between Joshua and family members, friends, and business associates. The letters to his wife, Elizabeth Izard Middleton, written on the eve of the Civil War are particularly poignant. A significant amount of correspondence between Joshua and his cousin, Rhode Island senator and governor John Brown Francis (1791-1864), is also included. A majority of these letters, written during the Civil War, reveal information about Joshua's views on political, economic, and social issues, including his views on slavery.

Fisher's other papers include compositions, essays, addresses, papers, and presentations, some of which appear to be school related. The compositions mostly focus on Pennsylvania and American history, the Episcopal Church, politics, and education. Also included are two handwritten chapters (circa 1864) of Fisher's memoirs. These memoirs were later edited by Fisher's granddaughter Sophia Cadwalader and published in 1929 as The Recollections of Joshua Francis Fisher.

There are also items relating to Joshua Francis Fisher's estate and business matters. Concerning Fisher's estate are papers relating to the dispute between Fisher and his uncle, William Logan Fisher, over the former's inheritance, including a nine-page statement by Fisher (1829). The dispute resulted from Fisher feeling wronged by his uncle regarding an inheritance that he was to receive once he became an adult.

Several other family members are also represented in Fisher's papers, including the originator of the Fisher family in the Philadelphia region, John Fisher, and his son Thomas Fisher; Samuel Rowland Fisher (1745-1834), son of Joshua Fisher and Sarah Rowland; Elizabeth Powel Francis Fisher (b. 1777); Elizabeth Izard Middleton Fisher (1815-1890); and lastly, Henry Middleton Fisher (1851-1939). The earliest items among these papers are miscellaneous legal documents relating to John Fisher and his son Thomas Fisher, including jury summons against both men, as well as legal documents relating to Pennsylvania and Sussex County, Delaware, where the Fisher family initially resided. One notable item includes Samuel Rowland Fisher's handwritten account (circa 1780) of his arrest in 1779 on the charge of being a Tory. Like many other Quakers, the Fishers took a neutral position during the Revolution. The refusal of many Quakers to support the war resulted in hostile treatment.

Items relating to Elizabeth Powel Francis, Elizabeth Izard Middleton, and Henry Middleton Fisher are mostly family correspondence. Letters from Elizabeth Middleton to her husband, Joshua, written from South Carolina while on trips visiting her family, reveal much about the Middleton family and life in general amongst the upper classes in the antebellum South. Henry's letters sent home to family members provide much information on the social and educational life of a young man away at school in New England.

In Box 4 are materials relating to the Willing and Francis families that date from the mid eighteenth to late nineteenth century, and include correspondence, genealogical information, and estate papers. Most of the family letters are between Anne Willing and several family members, including her uncle Thomas Willing in England, and her brother Thomas Willing (1731-1821), who served as president of the Bank of North America, justice of the Pennsylvania Supreme Court, and mayor of Philadelphia. Many of these letters are transcribed in Joshua Francis Fisher's memoirs The Recollections of Joshua Francis Fisher (1929). Other than the discussion of personal matters, there is also news regarding the French and Indian War. There are also letters between Anne and her children as well as her husband, Tench Francis Jr. Other papers relating to Anne Willing Francis include recipes and household advice.

Also included in this series is correspondence relating to Tench Francis Sr., Pennsylvania attorney general from 1741 to 1754, and his wife as well as correspondence and other items relating to the children of Tench and Anne Willing Francis, in particular Sophia Francis Harrison and Charles Francis. There is also a copy of a report on the Meschianza, the elaborate celebration given in honor of British General Sir William Howe in Philadelphia on May 18, 1778 before his return to England, as well as a collection of letters from Levett Harris to John Forsyth, who served as secretary of state from 1834 to 1841, regarding relations with France.

Box 5 contains papers, including some genealogical information, from the Drinker and Wharton families dating from the late nineteenth to the mid twentieth century. Most of the materials relate to James Blathwaite Drinker (1882-1971), his wife Mary Frances Fisher (1896-1974), and their children. A significant amount of correspondence relates to James and Mary's son, Sandwith Drinker (1922-1945), who was killed in action during the Battle of Iwo Jima in March 1945. Most of the letters from Sandwith Drinker to his mother were written while Sandwith was away at school.

The box also contains literary manuscripts related to the Wharton family. These include numerous drafts, typescripts, and printed copies from Lippincott's Magazine of works by Phoebe Lyde, most likely the pseudonym used by Frances Brinley Wharton. Also included is an 80-page typescript of "Francois Villon: A romantic drama in four acts with songs" (1894) co-written by Thomas Wharton and Owen Wister. The manuscript contains some handwritten edits. There are also some miscellaneous materials relating to Cecilia Beaux, most of which are newspaper clippings, dating from 1906 to 1908, concerning exhibitions with which the artist was involved.

Box 6 contains correspondence and photographs relating to Francis Brinley Wharton (1861-1959). The bulk of these letters dates from the early to mid- twentieth century and includes numerous letters from friends and family members who served during the Second World War and the Korean War.

Box 7 contains two rolled multi-paged, deeds of partition for the Henry Drinker estate drafted in 1843.

The remaining boxes in the collection, Boxes 8 through 17, contain nineteenth-century daguerreotypes, ambrotypes, and silhouettes of various members of the Francis, Harrison, and Fisher families. The five daguerreotypes included are possibly those of Joshua Francis Fisher and his family. Ten of these items are not labeled. Also included is an encased medal belonging to Henry Middleton Fisher.

Appendix 2: Box and folder descriptions

Box 1 contains Fisher family materials as well as some items, such as family correspondence and genealogical information, relating to the Logan, Harrison, and Middleton families. This box includes some of the earliest items found in the collection. These items, located in Folder 1, include miscellaneous legal documents (1682-1734) relating to John Fisher and his son Thomas Fisher, including jury summons against both men, as well as legal documents relating to Pennsylvania and Sussex County, Delaware, where the Fisher family initially resided. Many of these documents, such as the “Declaration of Christian faith and allegiance to the British crown,” (1700) include the signatures of several notable Quaker individuals, such as Samuel Carpenter and Edward Shippen. One item is a copy of a legal document (circa 1700) with William Penn’s signature relating to the political relationship between Pennsylvania proprietary government and that of the lower counties, provincial assembly, and council. After being appraised, the original document was taken out of the collection.

Folder 2 contains miscellaneous Fisher family estate papers dating from 1762 to 1872. Included are items relating to the dispute between Joshua Francis Fisher and his uncle, William Logan Fisher, over the former’s inheritance, including a 9 page statement by Joshua F. Fisher (1829).

Folder 3 contains a partial handwritten account (circa 1780) by Samuel Rowland Fisher of his arrest in 1779 on the charge of being a Tory. Like many other Quakers, the Fishers took a neutral position during the Revolution. The refusal of many Quakers to support the war resulted in hostile treatment. Because they refused to swear an oath of allegiance to the new American government, Samuel and his brothers and father were arrested and taken to Winchester, Virginia, where they were detained for nearly nine months.

Folder 4 contains Fisher family genealogical-related items dating from circa 1733 to 1862, including six letters, dating from 1832, addressed to Joshua Gilpin in Wilmington from his cousins Thomas Fisher, J.W. Fisher, and Redwood Fisher. These items may have some genealogical information concerning the Gilpin family.

Folder 5 has miscellaneous materials relating to the Fisher family dating 1779 to 1869, including a letter from 1779 addressed to “The Dealers and Sellers of Flour in the City of Philadelphia” and a detailed list of household goods, mostly chinaware, imported by Joshua Fisher and shipped from China (1806).

The remaining folders in Box 1 contain miscellaneous materials concerning several families connected to the Fisher family, including the Harrison, Middleton, and Logan families. Folder 6 contains miscellaneous materials dating from 1846 that provides genealogical information on the Harrison family. Folder 7 contains Harrison family correspondence dating from 1792-1867. The majority of these letters relate to George Harrison and his wife Sophia Francis Harrison.

Folders 8 and 9 contain undated items that provide genealogical information about the Logan family, including a manuscript booklet compiled by Joshua Francis Fisher in 1828 entitled, "A History of the Logans of Restalrig." Also included is a booklet entitled "Extracts from the Diary of Sarah Fisher (nee Logan)." The extracts originally date from 1776-1777.

Folder 10 contains transcribed letters, circa 1830, from Deborah Logan to Joshua Francis Fisher. The letters contain historical information for the Historical Society of Pennsylvania as well as Logan family genealogical information.

Folder 11 contains a couple of miscellaneous items relating to the Middleton family, including two issues of the Charlestown Daily Courier (1865) and various newspaper clippings. One of the clippings is an account of the presentation given in South Carolina's General Assembly concerning Arthur Middleton's portrait to be hung in South Carolina's Senate chamber.

Box 2 contains the papers of Joshua Francis Fisher. Folder 1 contains letters from Joshua Francis Fisher to various correspondents dating from 1837 to 1867. The letters to his wife, Elizabeth Izard Middleton Fisher, written on the eve of the Civil War are particularly poignant. Folder 2 contains letters of various correspondents that were sent to Joshua Francis Fisher between 1826 and 1870. Some of these correspondents include noted Philadelphia publisher Mathew Carey and lawyer and author Sidney George Fisher. Also included is a lengthy letter (1851) from Joshua's brother-in-law, Arthur Middleton in Naples, which contains a poem entitled "Washington's Appeal to South Carolina." Middleton was a unionist and he requested that Fisher have his poem published anonymously.

Folders 3 and 4 contain a series of letters, most of which date from 1857 to 1854, from Joshua Francis Fisher to his cousin, Rhode Island senator and governor, John Brown Francis (1791-1864). Joshua wrote the majority of these letters during the Civil War; thus, they reveal information about his views on political, social, and economic issues, including his views on slavery. Although Joshua died in 1873, one of the letters is dated 1889. Folder 5 contains letters, dating from 1847 to 1854, from John Brown Francis to Joshua Francis Fisher.

Folder 6 contains letters from Joshua Francis Fisher to his son Henry Middleton Fisher. These letters, dating from 1866 to 1872, were written mostly from Philadelphia to Henry while he was away at school at St. Paul's in Concord, New Hampshire, and Harvard University.

Folders 7 and 8 contain letters to Joshua Francis Fisher while Joshua was on an extended trip to Europe from 1856 to 1858. Folder 7 includes letters from G. Roberts Smith, a close family friend who attended to Fisher's domestic business and family needs. In addition to providing information concerning Fisher's children as well as local and national events, Smith reports in detail the status of Fisher's numerous business accounts and real estate holdings. Included in the letters is a manuscript book, 1856-1858, that Smith kept listing Fisher's estate matters. Folder 8 includes letters from J. Warner Erwin, a conveyancer who managed Fisher's numerous real estate holdings. Erwin also managed Fisher's country estate, Alventhorpe, collected rents, and repaired properties.
