Abstract

John Bartram was an eighteenth-century botanist. He established a premier botanic garden in America and made extensive journeys throughout the eastern United States, during which gathered many hitherto unknown American plants. His son William was also an eminent botanist. This collection contains papers of John Bartram and his sons William, Isaac, and Moses. Included are journals written by John Bartram, observations of his journeys, and correspondence. William Bartram is represented by correspondence, photostats of his journey observations, illustrations, a commonplace book, and his Pharmacopoeia. Also included in the collection are Moses Bartram's diplomas, Isaac Bartram's letter book, and miscellaneous family letters, checks, and receipts.

Background note

John Bartram (1699-1777) was the self-taught "Father of American Botany." Bartram's career as a botanist began with the creation of his garden in Kingsessing, Pennsylvania. While Bartram's botanical garden was probably not the first in America, it soon became the largest and most impressive. He traveled extensively throughout the eastern United States collecting plant specimens. His first expedition was through Maryland and Virginia, where he traveled up the James River and into the Blue Ridge Mountains. Other trips led Bartram through the Catskill Mountains and Oswego, New York, to Lake Ontario, and later to the Carolinas. Bartram's final trip, in 1765, took him to Florida, where he served as King George's royal botanist.

Of John Bartram's nine children, William (1739-1823) is the best known. He attended the Philadelphia Academy for four years, beginning in 1752. Despite his father's desire that he learn a trade, William was fascinated by botany and pursued his love of nature throughout his life. He accompanied his father on the 1765 expedition in Florida and, in 1773, returned to further explore the state. William spent nearly four years in the southern United States and later published an account of his travels. Two of John Bartram's other children, Moses and Isaac Bartram, were Philadelphia merchants.

Scope & content

The majority of materials in this collection relate to John and William Bartram. Items of note include John's incoming correspondence and William's incoming and outgoing correspondence. Among the correspondents represented are Benjamin Smith Barton, William Byrd, Alexander Calhoun, Mark Catesby, Peter Collinson, Benjamin Franklin, James Freeman, and John Fothergill. There are also fragments of the journals both men kept during various exploratory missions. Texts written by John Bartram consist of a portion of his observations made on his journey through the Carolinas, Georgia, and Florida, 1765; and the full text of the diary, 1765-1766, transcribed by William Darlington, "with illustrative notes from his correspondence." William Bartram's writings are represented by his "Travels through the Carolinas, Georgia and East and West Florida, 1773-1777," his Pharmacopoeia on plant and medicinal remedies, and a copy of his answers to Benjamin Smith Barton's question concerning Native Americans. Other material in the collection includes original engravings (and Photostats) of various flora and fauna, William Bartram's commonplace book, the Bartram family bible, miscellaneous family letters, checks and receipts.

The papers of Isaac and Moses Bartram comprise a small section of the collection, and include Isaac Bartram's letter book of 1790 to 1814, four of Moses Bartram's diplomas, and several family letters.

BARTRAM BOOKS VOLUME II

The letters in this volume are for the most part original letters from Peter Collinson to John Bartram, and, unless noted, are listed as those. The letters are in several different handwritings. At the beginning and towards the end they seem to be Collinson's own hand. He seems to in his prosperous date employed a scrivener.
